- This is a new course concerning assignment criteria for appraisals not for lending use.
- New course on handing non-lender assignments including considerations of Scope Of Work, importance of engagement agreements, identifying the Client involved in the assignment. Intended Use and User(s).
- Varying definitions of value to consider. Varying Effective Dates of Value as many are retrospective value assignments. Different document formats. Full or limited observation conditions. Possibly no observation of subject at all. Extraordinary assumptions or hypothetical conditions may need to be used in the report.
- Difficulties and requirements for different types of assignments. Extent of the assignment. Who will be using the conclusions of the report to understand Intended Use and Intended User(s). Documentation to include in the report for different types of assignments.
- Consider divorce, estate, litigation, valuations for establishment of trusts. Relocation valuation assignments require special training. Bankruptcy assignments related to lenders, credit companies. Litigation assignments which may end with appraiser being deposed & in trial court. Appraiser needs to establish chain of documentation for litigation assignments.
- Providing appraisals for legal cases involving working with attorney's is interesting, economically rewarding but requires expertise in preparing for and completing the assignment. Discussion covers the process of working with attorney's, preparing for court & presenting testimony.
- Discussion of the General Purpose formats as to structure in use by appraisers.
