- Recognize the responsibility of the appraiser. Reduce your exposure to complaints or criticisms
- Lack of supporting the adjustments used in the residential appraisal report is usually the most common appraiser mistake reported by BREA. Commonly a review of an appraisal also concludes a report lacks credibility because the report lacks analysis supporting the adjustments used in the sales comparison approach to value.
- The APB on for the Appraisal Foundation indicates criteria which should be utilized by the appraiser.
- What does the “appraisers peers” do?
- Matched paired analysis. Statistical analysis. Using trend graphs. Using other charts and other graphs. “Sensitivity analysis” Pivot tables. Relying on published data.
- Data analysis required to compile the information. Demonstrate and explain the results.
- Verification of sales data. Process and conclusions. Reliability of data used in a report.
- Data and sales comparable verification process requirements and common mistakes. Adjustments need to be stated and supported in the appraisal report.
- Positive or negative adjustments related to market time change. How long of a period of changing market to use a market based trend change.
- Supporting concession adjustment, appraising in a changing market. Selection of comparable sales. Valuation Advisories from the APB. What is addressed in USPAP?
- How appraiser can use of excel and how it’s use by the appraiser in completing data sorting and supporting data.
- How to figure per square foot adjustments by supportable process.
- Is regression analysis helpful? Required?
- Examples in class on deriving adjustments. GLA, Room count, variances in floor levels, accessory dwellings impact, other features and factors. Is age variance a supportable adjustment? Effective age versus calendar age. Pool versus no pool.
